Through the course of their careers, law graduates find themselves dealing with corporate finance issues that are generally left out the law curriculum. Finance and law are co-constituted and, therefore, a fundamental understanding of corporate finance will be beneficial to legal practitioners. The University of Free State Faculty of Law and the ILI-South African Centre for Excellence (ILI-SACE) are presenting an innovative corporate finance short learning programme aimed at presenting salient elements of corporate finance to practising lawyers. This eight-week programme will enable law graduates to gain a working knowledge of the important elements of corporate finance that is relevant for their practices.

The learning experience will enable participants to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the relationship between law and finance
- Demonstrate an understanding of the different types of financial markets and their functions
- Understand the different approaches to capital budgeting
- Evaluate capital structure policies and identify practical issues in capital structure policies
- Analyse and interpret financial statements of corporations
- Assess the effectiveness of corporate governance policies and practices

Upon successful completion of the programme, participants will receive a certificate of completion jointly issued by the University of Free State and the ILI-South African Centre for Excellence.
